RHOADS ENERGY — UPGRADE YOUR FLEET TO PROPANE

The idea of green energy is gaining momentum, and rightly so. But too often, one greener fuel doesn't get the attention it deserves: propane.

Propane is an efficient, flexible fuel that can power vehicle fleets while delivering serious cost savings and significant environmental benefits.

At Rhoads Energy, we have a decade of experience helping school bus fleets upgrade to propane. We quickly recognized that we should upgrade our own fleet too – and now Rhoads Energy operates 25 propane-powered vehicles. Here's why:

Lower cost — A gallon of propane currently costs less than half as much as a gallon of either gasoline or diesel fuel.

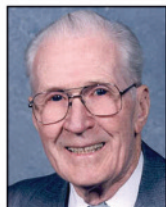

Cleaner air — Propane is a low-carbon, near-zero alternative energy source. Today's propane-powered school buses produce up to 96 percent less toxic emissions than diesel buses, which means students waiting at the bus stop are breathing much cleaner air ... and so are the rest of us.

Easy maintenance — Propane vehicles cost less to maintain because they don't require the filters and fluids needed on new diesel engines.

At Rhoads Energy, our drivers have discovered other critical advantages. Propane vehicles are easy to fuel up quickly (unlike their electric counterparts) and they are much quieter to operate than diesel engines.

Today, school districts and managers of commercial fleets are seeking ways to operate greener, more efficient fleets. Propane provides a far cleaner alternative to diesel or gasoline – and it's a reliable fuel produced right here in Pennsylvania.
