THE POWER OF MASTER MIND GROUPS NOW AVAILABLE TO SMALL BUSINESS OWNERS

By Terri Hill, Owner, Two Hills Consulting; SBRA Member

How would you like a shortcut to success, have access to information from others who have traveled the same path and know what to avoid and where to go?

That's the idea behind one of the most powerful concepts ever developed. It's called a Master Mind Group. Master Mind groups have been around for more than 100 years and were identified by Napoleon Hill in Think and Grow Rich as one of the factors in achieving success in life. Henry Ford, Thomas Edison and Andrew Carnegie used them. And, current thought leaders like Jack Canfield have used a recommendation from his Master Mind group to successfully bring the Chicken Soup for the Soul series to publication after getting more than 140 rejection letters.

For those who are unfamiliar with the concept, Master Mind groups are made up of like-minded individuals whose purpose is to help each other achieve successful results. These people are willing to give and receive advice from each other. By combining the knowledge, experience and skills of the group, they are able to multiply their output and create exponential gains.

Who hasn't had a problem that they're struggling to solve? One where you feel that if you just keep at it with a determined effort, you'll finally have that breakthrough? Yet, sometimes, what's required is not persistence, but another perspective. Just by looking at the problem in another way, the solution becomes crystal clear. The Master Mind group provides you with different perspectives. So, that you can quickly realize if you need to change direction or continue to press on.

Problems and challenges are shared in a confidential setting. There are no restrictions on what topics can be covered. The members of the group are encouraged to bring up whatever is important to them at the moment. So, the topics covered could range from HR issues to Strategic Planning to Understanding Social Media and Marketing to Creating a Successful Sales Strategy and Team. The varied experience and knowledge in the group elicits new ideas on how to solve the challenges that are most pressing. Big problems mean big learning opportunities.

To give you an idea of what big problems or accomplishments are possible. You can look at the results of Walt Disney, Warren Buffett and Franklin D. Roosevelt. All of these men participated in Master Mind groups. They used the collective knowledge to propel them to great achievements in their respective fields.

So, are you ready to compound your effectiveness and get involved in a Master Mind group? The Small Business Resource Association (SBRA), has developed a program specifically for small businesses called Collective Minds. Every participant is dedicated to the success of each other's business. They are willing to give because they know what they'll get — another perspective and a shortcut to taking their business to the next level. The program will run for 12 months and kick-off in September.
