Pottstown Man Named Finalist for National Caregiver of the Year Award

Jermaine Cureton is a Finalist for the Visiting Angels Top Honor

Visiting Angels, the nation's leading provider of senior home care, named Jermaine Cureton of Pottstown as a finalist for the 2023 National Caregiver of the Year award. He received a $2,500 check and a special award at a ceremony held at the Pottstown office.

When Jermaine started with Visiting Angels of Pottstown, Pennsylvania eight years ago, he brought along his magnanimous personality, fantastic sense of humor, and infectious attitude.

"Jermaine is very charismatic and connects so well with clients," explains Alycia Wertman, one of the Visiting Angels of Pottstown franchise owners. "He loves what he does, and it shows. Everyone in our office voted to nominate Jermaine for Caregiver of the Year. He is so deserving; he provides a great service to our community, positively impacts lives, and makes a difference in the lives of his clients and their families."

Phil, one of Jermaine's clients, has depended on a caregiver for more than 20 years since suffering a serious injury that left him wheelchair-bound. "Jermaine is one of the best caregivers I've ever had," he said. "He is such a highly professional person yet so personable. I really appreciate him. He is a great representative for Visiting Angels. He should be teaching other people around the country how to be a caregiver."

Jermaine's dedication to his clients knows no bounds. When his car broke down, he walked more than two miles to work so he could care for his client.

"The mark of a great caregiver is one who sees their work as a mission, not just a job," says Larry Meigs, CEO of Visiting Angels. "Jermaine demonstrates this quality, as well as compassion, patience, and dedication. We congratulate Jermaine on his recognition as one of our top caregivers and thank him for his extraordinary commitment to our clients."
