

The Fleischmann Law Firm

Just 22 miles outside of Philadelphia, nestled in the quaint commercial village of Skippack, Pennsylvania lies a law firm that fights for the people and businesses that make up its local community. The Fleischmann Law Firm sits as an entry way into Skippack Village, acting as a keystone for Southeastern, Pennsylvania.

The Fleischmann Law Firm, P.C. first opened its doors in 2014 by Craig Fleischmann. Craig is a graduate of The Dickinson School of Law, now part of Penn State University, and Drexel University. He has his roots in Montgomery County and has been practicing law there since 1989. Craig primarily practices business law, construction law, and commercial litigation with an emphasis on contract disputes and business debt collection. He engages clients with transparency to provide objective and cost-effective solutions to meet their particular needs. When the firm opened, Craig ran his operation mostly solo. In July 2020, the Firm expanded, taking on two new employees and expanding the Firm's areas of practice.

Franqui-Ann Raffaele is a graduate of Widener Commonwealth Law School and Ursinus College. Franqui has spent almost her entire life in Montgomery County. She focuses her practice on her passions, estate planning, estate administration and elder law. She has represented clients in a host of areas, including creating wills, power of attorneys, and living wills, Medicaid, family care plans, and probating estates. She approaches her clients with compassion, empathy, and diligence. She enjoys volunteering her time through the local bar association, most recently participating at the Wills for Seniors event at the Senior Law Center.

Craig and Franqui are active in the Montgomery Bar Association (MBA) and Pennsylvania Bar Association (PBA). Craig is currently Co-Chair of the MBA Construction Law Committee, and Franqui is involved in several committees and sections of the MBA and PBA. Both are members of the 422 Business Alliance, where Craig serves as Vice President, a network of business owners and professionals that meets weekly.

When clients call into the office, the first voice they hear is that of the Firm's Legal Assistant, James Phelan. A Temple University graduate, James assists the Firm by providing administrative and organizational support. He also helps promote the Firm's marketing efforts.
